caused a buzz in the astronomy community because it was significantly brighter than the average comet.

Johnson said early estimates were that Austin could become brighter than the planet Venus. But remembering the fiasco that surrounded the rosy predictions about Comet Kohoutek in 1973, astronomers were hesitant to offer brash forecasts about Austin.

Good thing. Like Kohoutek, Austin appears to have fizzled. Johnson says its potential for brightness changed dramatically.

He says the gases of the comet may have boiled off earlier than expected. Johnson also says Austin appears to be more gaseous than dusty. It is the frozen, dirty material that lights up a comet as it bathes in the sun's rays.

Regardless, Austin can now be seen low over the western horizon for a short period of time just after sunset. Johnson says it is just above and to the right of planet Mercury.

The comet will continue to dip closer to the horizon as the week continues. On Monday, the comet reaches perihelion, the point in its orbit closest to the sun.

UNR to highlight humanities, liberal arts in new ads

By Darcy De Leon/Gazette-Journal

In its second round of TV and newspaper ads beginning this month, the University of Nevada, Reno will emphasize teaching and the humanities instead of research.

Professors and students criticized administrators after the campaign began last fall. They complained the ads ignored the humanities and liberal arts and emphasized research over teaching.

But members of the Curtis & Rogers advertising firm heading the one-year $250,000 campaign said they weren't ignoring anyone.

"All along we've wanted to focus on every different college," Amy Brazil, a Curtis & Rogers account supervisor, said. "Last time we hit all the harder sciences and this time we wanted to hit on the softer sciences."

Dad of 2 victims angered former Cub leader won't receive jail time

By Martha Miller/Gazette-Journal

A former Cub Scout leader charged with molesting several of his Reno pack members was given probation Tuesday, enraging the father of two of his victims.

Ray Opfer, 41, received five years of probation for one count of lewdness with a child under 14. He could have been sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine for the felony charge.

Under terms of the probation, Opfer must not come in contact with any children under age 16 except for his own son and a friend of his son.

"I'm very sorry for the hurt that has been caused to all the people involved in this incident," he told Washoe District Judge Robin Wright.

But Opfer's apology was little comfort to a father of two of the victims. The parent said he was outraged at the sentence and that the judge should have given Opfer at least one year in jail.

"They (officials in the District Attorney's office) roll over and play dead," he said. "And how can a judge sit on the stand and make a decision like this?"

"It's gross. I can't even believe it."

Deputy District Attorney Ron Rachow said his office had agreed to go along with the recommendation reached by the Department of Parole and Probation and he was bound to follow that agreement. The department made the recommendation after interviewing Opfer, the victims and their parents, Rachow said.

"Whether you agree with it or not, it's the judge's call," Rachow said.

The father said he and the parents of another victim have filed a lawsuit against Opfer and the Cub Scouts for not checking Opfer's background before allowing him to be a pack leader.

Opfer pleaded guilty Jan. 29 to one count of lewdness with a child under 14 just before he was to face trial. He was originally charged with six counts, but three were dismissed last October.

Washoe County authorities charge that between September 1988 and May 1989, Opfer invited the Cub Scouts to his hot tub and would rub their backs, thighs and stomachs in a way that sexually aroused him. The boys ranged in age from 10 to 13.

Opfer's lawyer, Martin Wiener, said Opfer has never even had a parking ticket. Wiener played down the sex charges, saying that on a scale of one to 10, the seriousness of Opfer's crimes was less than one.

"We have two incidents of football tackling and one in a hot tub," Wiener said.

Rachow said the charges were serious and that Opfer took advantage of the youths, who had come to his house to work off unpaid Scouting dues.

Compromise offered in Sparks lunch flap

Sparks High School students may get more time for lunch if they agree to help keep the school grounds clean, under a compromise reached Tuesday by students and administrators.

About 250 students staged an afternoon protest Monday, refusing to go to class until school officials agreed to negotiate to extend the 35-minute lunch period. The teens complained the lunch period, shorter than that at many other area high schools, didn't allow enough time for students to go home to eat.

The agreement hashed out Tuesday morning calls for a 45-minute lunch period in exchange for keeping litter out of hallways and grounds.

"It's not like the hall's cluttered, but it would help to get (students) into the mentality of throwing litter in the garbage instead of on the floor," said Andrew Blair, a 15-year-old sophomore who helped organize the protest and negotiations.

The entire student body will vote on the agreement Monday.

NHP investigates crash

The Nevada Highway Patrol is investigating a collision between a private car and a Reno police car Friday night to determine whether the police officer should be charged, a CHP spokesman said Tuesday.

Officer David Della, 23, was driving south on Lake Street at Plaza Street at 10:40 p.m. when his police car veered across the center line into the path of a northbound car. The NHP report does not indicate a reason for the accident.

The Highway Patrol charged the other driver, Chanelle F. Nelson, 25, of Reno, with driving under the influence.

Hepatitis prompts shoos at day-care center

By Cory Farley/Gazette-Journal

An outbreak of hepatitis has prompted the Washoe District Health Department to order inoculations for about 30 children in a Reno day-care center.

A Health Department official said the outbreak isn't unusual and should cause few problems.

Three kindergartners among 160 students at Holy Child Day Home, 440 Reno Ave., have developed hepatitis A over the last three weeks, said Barbara Hunt, nursing supervisor in the county's communicable disease program. Their teachers and some classmates and family members have received injections of immune gamma globulin, which gives temporary protection from the disease.

Hepatitis A, also called infectious hepatitis, is an inflammation of the liver caused by a virus. Symptoms can include weakness, loss of appetite, nausea, vomiting and jaundice. It normally lasts two to six weeks, and victims do not become carriers.

Another disease, hepatitis B, is longer-lasting and sometimes fatal. It is caused by a different virus and does not develop from hepatitis A. It has not been found at the day-care center.

Hunt said hepatitis A can be serious in adults, but is usually not a concern when contracted by children.

"Young children often have minor symptoms or none at all. Often, as happened in this situation, we don't realize there is hepatitis in a day-care facility until the family members start becoming ill."

Doctors report hepatitis to the Health Department, which investigates to try to find a source of infection. In this instance, two cases were found in families with children at Holy Child, where testing turned up students who had the disease.

Six more cases involving families of students have since been diagnosed. Members of those families also have been inoculated to stop the spread of the virus. Anne Pietrapolo, director of the Holy Child center, said the Health Department has told her to admit no new patients for six weeks to avoid exposing them to the illness. Meanwhile, the center is being watched closely to see if new cases develop.

But Hunt said parents should not move children already in the day-care center. "We really don't want families to do that," she said. "If your children are in the class, they're already exposed. If you move them, you could spread it all over town."

Hunt said outbreaks of hepatitis aren't unusual in schools and day-care centers. The disease can be passed from person to person, but usually results from eating food or drinking water contaminated with the virus. Young children's imperfect bathroom habits and inattention to hygiene often are factors in its spread.

Dear Don:

Thanks so much for the material you recently sent concerning the above named individual. This is most helpful to us as we prepare a file which will lead to refusal of registration should he attempt it at a later time.

Personal & Confidential Re: Ray Opfer

Dear Paul,

The file on Ray Opfer is rather incomplete. Please note the spelling is OFFER.

I understand from members of our current staff that Ray Opfer had been a registered member of the BSA for 24 years, most recently as a Cubmaster and Webelos leader of Pack 22 sponsored by the Rotary Club of Reno.

On May 30, 1989 the Reno Police department notified John Collier that Ray Opfer was to be arrested for lewd activities involving Webelos Scouts at his home.

John Collier and Robert Stewart, the council president delivered the notification of termination.

Subsequently, Mr. Opfer was arrested, arraigned, and litigation continues. There has been some local press coverage.

Let me know how I can be of further help.

Warmest regards.

Dear Mr. Offer,

After careful review, we have decided that your association and any future registration with the Boy Scouts of America should be suspended. We are therefore compelled to request that you sever any relations that you may have with the Boy Scouts of America.

You should understand the BSA membership registration is a privilege and is not automatically granted to everyone who applies. We reserve the right to suspend registration whenever there is a concern that an individual may not meet the high standards of membership which the BSA seeks to provide for American youth.

If you wish to have this decision reviewed by a Council Review committee, please write to me, explaining your version of the facts supporting your claim that your association as a BSA member should be reinstated.

Sincerely yours,

Robert E. Stewart
